This past weekend National Union of Public Service and Allied Workers, held its North West Provincial Congress in Mmabatho High School Hall. The provincial congress underscores the provinces improvements and proposed resolutions to challenges faced by the union. The main objective of the congress is the election of Provincial Executive Council by the members who will task with running the province for the next three years.

The congress under the theme; “unions, whose interest do they serve” vigorously addressed the central issues directly affecting members and of significance amid on-going salary negotiations with members anticipating conclusion on the matter.

The congress was attended by the NUPSAW’s national office bearers, CONSAWU affiliates and sponsors; ASSUPOL, Kunene Makopo Risk Solution and Inkomo Provider Funeral Solution.

CONSAWU General Secretary Khulile NKushubana was fervent in his speech on black consciousness with regards to messages conveyed when singing our struggle songs. He warned delegates against perpetuate mental slavery.

The elected PEC focus for the next three years will be intense recruitment in the Public Service Health Departments and Hospitals in the Private Sectors which are areas not penetrated as previously alleged.
